SUBJECT: IO, IO, IT'S OFF TO WORK WE GO!

11. Still looking for your next assignment? The Bureau of International Organization Affairs has a great job for you. We are the "Bureau without Borders" -- that means exciting positions in fantastic cities working on front-page issues with global implications. Your tour in IO will be a rewarding one.

12. Do you like to travel? Our Washington jobs usually involve overseas travel to attend conferences, conduct bilateral and multilateral negotiations, and meet with experts. Our non-Washington vacancies are in some of the world's political, cultural, and commercial hubs -- New York, Geneva, and Vienna. Our positions are accompanied, and offer COLAs rather than differentials, but your work will be noticed by promotion boards.

13. Do you like multilateral work? IO will give you a unique opportunity to do both multilateral and bilateral negotiations and policy-making. IO officers develop important relationships with delegates from the many countries of the world that are members of UN bodies, security organizations, international fora, specialized agencies and other groups. You'll develop expert negotiating skills to use throughout your career. And you will work within the Department and through the interagency process to implement existing policies and shape new ones.

14. How will IO work for you? We will make sure your tour leads to your professional advancement. We have many jobs that will help you meet the elective requirements of the Career Development Program (CDP). For example, some of our positions in Washington have significant and substantial supervisory responsibility, which will help you meet the "leadership effectiveness" elective of the Career Development Program. Many of our Washington positions are also interfunctional, where you'll work on cross-cutting issues like multilateral policy coordination, political-military relations and refugee coordination -- all of which fill the needs for the "operational effectiveness" elective. And it's important to add that our Front Office works hard to give all officers experience throughout the building and to provide opportunities for officers at all levels to give feedback on how their IO experience is going.

15. There have been important changes to the bidding process this year. While bids on all positions are due the same day (October 26), HR will not release bid books (lists of official bidders) to the Bureaus until the respective season (Pre, Early, and Regular/Stretch) in which the job may be filled. This means bidders need to share their bids and preferences across the seasons with the JEX/HR. For IO Management and Specialists positions, contact Jamie Patrick (x6-4615) through the EUR-IO-Bid-Mgt-Spec mailbox on the GAL. For IO Policy and PD positions, contact James Plasman (x7-0692) through the IO-Bid-Pol-PD mailbox on the GAL.

16. Please take the time to browse the descriptions for vacancies in FSBid and contact the points of contact and the incumbents below about the positions. We look forward to hearing from you!
